INTEGRITY CONTRAST

Page Diogenes or some other guy who is looking for that rare species of office holder who disdains acceptance of a perfectly legal gratuity.

He has been found in Frank Murphy, governor general of the Philippines.

The legislature there, made up of our little brown island bootlickers, thought so much of Murphy's just and equitable rule that they decided to make him a present of $4,500 of public money. Mr. Murphy thought otherwise, declaring his salary of $18,000 a year, was for his services and would suffice.

Apparently we have an entirely different situation existing here in California, where recent disclosures have proven that the moral tone of a number of our public servants is not astronomically slanted, but rather is nadirwards.

We find clerks taking advantage of the discount allowed the State in its purchases and applying the discount to their personal advantage. One even had the temerity to

Local Schools Armistice Day Program Held

Richmond schools observed Armistice Day yesterday with programs and meetings. All schools will be closed Monday in observance of the day.

At the Richmond Union high school yesterday Lieutenant G. Raymond Daugherty of the National Guard was the speaker in the absence of General David P. Barrows, who was unable to attend the session. Daugherty discussed the rights of the life of General Barrows, former President of the University of California.

The speaker was introduced by Elton Brombacher, president of the student body.

At the Longfellow Junior high school, the Torchbearers Dramatic class presented a German play under the direction of Mrs. Irma Kruse Lederwood. Those taking parts were Katherine Kivala, Vera Bergman, Dick Hinn, Charles Wheeler, Ravenna Loydal, Anna Beth Garside and Allen Goe.

At the Roosevelt Junior high school a play was presented and patriotic numbers were played by the school orchestra. Those taking part in the play were Paul Zien, Mary Sampson, David Elchor, Eileen Gernsmaier, George Saxon, Bob Moore, Betty Trane, Catherine Davis, and Mickey Allyn. Reder Clays directed the play.

Stocks Rise On New York Market After Decision

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Wall Street gave the Baltimore Federal court decision invalidating the utility holding company act an uproarious reception today which brought the heaviest trading in more than a year on the Stock Exchange and more than two years on the Curb Exchange.

Father And Son Running For Mayor

Intercepted Pass In Third Quarter Gives Richmond Victory

Conceded not a Chinaman's chance, outweighed from 26 to 25 pounds to a man, nationalized by football "experts" of Oakland and San Francisco newspapers, the little Richmond high school football team went through to win a smashing 7 to 0 victory over the strong Berkeley High School football squad at Berkeley yesterday.

This game gave the Richmond squad its first ACAL title and ended one of the most successful seasons in the history of the local school.

WHALEN SCORES

The flashing feet of Glenn Whalen, diminutive fullback, scored the winning touchdown for Richmond in the third quarter. Whalen intercepted a pass and raced 35 yards to score. The old, trusty toe of Ed Jimmie Wilson kicked the extra point to put the game on ice.

Richmond High School students, to say absolutely nothing of the grown-ups—went stark mad when the game was over. More than 1000 Richmond fans, who were in the record crowd that saw the game joined in a deafening celebration. On their return to Richmond an impromptu parade of machines down Macdonald avenue, accompanied by the hooting of horns and the yelling of the students, announced the news that Richmond had won.

Throughout the evening this newspaper office was flooded by telephone calls from anxious residents. Informed of the Richmond victory, almost every one responded with a shout of "Good for them!"

PROUD OF TEAM

And Richmond may be well proud of its victory. The local boys, underdogs from start to finish, outplayed, outsmarted and outgeneraled the Berkeley team for 60 minutes. Berkeley was unable to get up one first down throughout the contest and the stronger, and heavier defending champions were kept within the shadow of their goal line throughout the game.

The Oilers played football in a manner which would have delighted the heart of any big college football coach. The boys played the game like a well coached, brainy team.

Mate Tried To Trade Son For Machine Tire

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—UP—Mrs. Roy Murray, whose husband had just asked that he be sent to Folsom prison for one year "to get away from her as far as possible," falteringly admitted that she had been living with another man.

But then she told her side of the story. "I left my husband because he drank and beat me. He has a long police record and he's no good," she said, then added the crowning touch: "Why judge, a few years ago I caught him trying to trade our six year old son for an automobile tire."

Plot To Kill U. S. Ambassador Blocked

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 8.—UP—A new plot to kill American Ambassador Jefferson Caffery was thwarted last week by Cuban military intelligence operatives. It was disclosed today.

It was planned to waylay Caffery and fire on his automobile.

WPA Men To Lay Protest To Officials

WPA workers of Richmond last night announced that a delegation of employees will be sent to meet officials of the WPA at Mare Island to discuss some means whereby transportation will be furnished to local relief workers on the Mare Island navy project.

At last night's meeting, held in WOW hall, with 200 present, it was pointed out that under the present set-up more than 300 Richmond and El Cerrito WPA men are taken to the state law and the drivers of the machines are liable for damages if any one is injured in a wreck. In addition, it was said, the owners of the machine have no licenses to transport passengers.

Officials of the club stated that transients who are employed on the project are given transportation from Crockett to the navy base on buses chartered by the government, and that this should be done for the Richmond and El Cerrito men. Some of those employed on the project receive only $44 a month and from this must pay transportation costs.

A lengthy discussion of the differences in wages paid on Contra Costa county WPA projects and on Alameda county projects was held by the organization. The members are awaiting the outcome of action taken by county authorities on this matter.

Another meeting will be held by the WPA men in the near future.

FEAR LOST FLIER HAS BEEN KILLED

SINGAPORE, (Saturday), Nov. 8.—(AP)—Charles E. Smith, a 26-year-old Australian flier, was feared the prey of man-eating sharks, an airplane and a cargo ship, en route to the Bay of Bengal today seeking the Indian continent, according to a dispatch from the British consul in Singapore, J. T. Pethbridge.

There is no phone, only Southern Cross, was the here at 5:20 A. M. Friday on this leg of a flight from England to Australia. A third flier, Ford Smith had said would be his last over long reaches of ocean.

FIGHTING STORM

Two hours after the Lady Southern Cross was here, C. E. Smith, another Australian aviator, landed and said he saw Kingbird Smith desperately fighting a storm over the Bay of Bengal, the plane only 200 feet above tossing waves with flames streaming from the exhaust. Melrose himself reached here only after a fierce fight over the bay.

Melrose gave Kingbird Smith position as 150 miles from shore. The Royal air force crew here snatched into instant action to attempt a rescue.

WAS GOING HOME

Kingbird Smith left England early Wednesday on what he said would be a leisurely flight home. But he straggled along at a record pace and when he left Allahabad, India, he was only two and a half hours behind the astonishing time set by Scott and Black, winners of the London-Australia speed derby. The great Australian, who blazed air trails over all the oceans of the world, twice flew the Atlantic and was the first to fly the Pacific to Australia, has dared death in the air since he was a war pilot for Great Britain in the World War. He was born in Australia 35 years ago.

Ocean liners, tramp steamers and government and private planes, at sight of Kingbird-Smith's plane by radio sped to the vicinity where his plane was seen by Melrose, who abandoned his flight to join the search.

Judge Is Named To Hear Third Trial For Dave

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—UP—David Lamsco will go to trial next Tuesday in San Jose before Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco, for the third time on wife murder charges. It was decided today in two swift legal moves.

Chief Justice William Wast of the State Supreme court, acting as chairman of the State Judicial Council named Trabucco for the trial, following presentation of a petition for such action by Santa Clara county Deputy Clerk Albert Newlin.

Federal Judge A. F. St. Sute denied a writ of habeas corpus filed by Leo Friedman asking transfer of the case to Federal court. The writ would have transferred Lamsco from custody of the Santa Clara county sheriff to the United States marshal in San Francisco.

Healey Is Defied By Judge Johnston On Grand Jury Publicity

The threat of District Attorney Francis P. Healey that he intended to broadcast the testimony of witnesses before the grand jury to the newspapers, exploded a bombshell yesterday that caused Superior Judge T. D. Johnston to step in and look horns with the public prosecutor. For the day the jurist came out on top of the horn, but the district attorney still maintains that he will give out every action of the jury.

HEALEY WARNED

Just what will be the final outcome of the passage at arms and how far it will extend, notwithstanding that the jury in secret session in the afternoon, passed a motion recommending to the district attorney that he refrain from giving out secret information, is hard to tell.

MAY BE BARRED

It has been stated that it is not far fetched to say that it is possible if the public prosecutor continues to give out information in the future, the inquisitorial body may bar the official from the sessions.

Healey had perfected his plans to give out verbatim testimony of witnesses, by securing both court reporters, Lydia Raffetto and Gertrude Dinsmore, and for them to work in relays of a half hour in the grand jury room. While one was taking testimony, the other would be transcribing it to be turned over to the district attorney to be given to the newspapers.

Just before noon, Judge Johnston learned of what was going on, went to the grand jury room, knocked on the door, and told the secret body he had instructions to give the members.

JUDGE'S STATEMENT

Public closed doors he made the following statement: "The law absolutely requires all proceedings before the grand jury to be secret and no public official or grand juror or officer shall disclose any of the proceedings." "A person being investigated before a grand jury has no right to have in attendance any attorney or

Artist Show Is Closed By Police; Nude Girls Held

NEW YORK, (Saturday) Nov. 9.—UP—Police closed the annual ball for nude artists conducted by the prominent Society of Illustrators and held five girls for night court action early today on charge of participating in an indecent exhibition, and dancing in the nude.

Some of the most prominent men in art and professional circles were said to have been in the audience of 800 men, wearing evening clothes in the Rockefeller theater on upper Fifth avenue when Liem, Harry Levin in uniform, appeared on the stage during an intermission and announced police were closing the show.

Half of the presentation, consisting of eight acts, had been given. The audience believed Levin was part of the entertainment and applauded his announcement. He continued to explain that police were closing "the show" but the audience was not convinced until several policemen began circulating thru the theater displaying their badges.

Bernard Schmidt of San Anselmo was named Supreme Pharaoh.

GAME PROBE TESTIMONY VERY HAZY

Slot machines, roulette wheels and tear gas bombs were the subject of an inquiry before the Pettigatti grand jury at Martinez yesterday that started in the morning and lasted until late in the afternoon.

NO ACTION TAKEN

The inquiry took quite a wide range, and many witnesses were examined but no action was taken by the inquisitorial body. The foreman announced at adjournment that the next meeting would be held on November 22nd, but only matters of a routine nature would be considered.

But the inquiry of the day was greatly overshadowed by a passage at arms between Superior Judge T. D. Johnston and District Attorney Francis Healey, as to the right of the district attorney to give out stenographic reports of the testimony of witnesses.

HAZY TESTIMONY

Most of the testimony given by witnesses as to previous seizure of a roulette wheel, a slot machine and their return to the Rancho San Pablo was of a very hazy nature. It is understood that no information was elicited on which any charge of a criminal nature could be based.

"SAME WHEEL"—HARRISON

The roulette wheel over which there is much dispute was placed on exhibition in the grand jury room. Deputy Sheriff Ralph Harrison testified that in a raid on the Rancho in 1934 he seized this same wheel, and put the date of the raid on the back of the wheel rim in chalk.

In the raid that was made about three weeks ago, this same wheel, it was claimed, was seized.

36 MACHINES

Harrison also told of 36 slot machines that were seized while he

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Nazi Germany has just sold the United States Government an important consignment of steel.

As a result, the New Deal may have more grief on its hands; this time from both organized labor and the steel barons, who for the first time in years have found an issue in which they stand united.

The steel is for the construction of a PWA bridge at Morehead City, N. C. In accordance with the law, the Public Works Administration asked for bids on this bridge and also on the Triborough bridge in New York. When the bids were opened, a German firm had bid lower than any American firm.

American steel plants immediately protested charging unfair competition. They submitted data showing that the Nazis were subsidized by the Hitler government and that they shipped the steel to the United States as ballast.

The PWA replied that under the law it was helpless. The law allows only a 15 percent differential between domestic and foreign bids, and the Nazi bid was 22 percent under the lowest American offer.

The steel companies countered that the Treasury, in some cases, had allowed a 25 percent differential.

The PWA threw responsibility on Comptroller General McCarl.

The steel barons and labor representatives then took the fight direct to the White House, where Secretary Marvin McIntyre promised to "investigate." That was the last heard from him.

Three days later the Nazi firm was awarded the Morehead contract. The contract for the New York Triborough bridge was held up. Apparently the fear of repercussions from New York's Catholic and Jewish population is being considered.

Meanwhile the angered steel companies and laborers are planning to fight the issue publicly. When the Nazi steel reaches Morehead, they propose taking photographs and distributing them throughout the country.

NO LIGHT VERSE
A chunky little man, with the manner of a banjo rooster, popped in at the "Writers' Projects" office of the WPA one morning, and dropped a suitcase on the floor.

He mopped his brow, breathed deeply, and announced: "I am a twenty-pound poet."

"But just what do you mean?" queried Reed Harris, executive editor.

"I am a twenty-pound poet," he repeated. "There it is!" He pointed to his suitcase. "I have written twenty pounds of poetry and I want the Government to publish it."

DIAMOND JIM AND COMEDY SUNDAY'S BILL

"Diamond Jim" Edward Arnold, biographer of John D. Rockefeller, says "The man who made me say 'No' to my own success on a double program at the Fox theater tomorrow with 'The Bishop Misbehaves' as an added touch to the 'Diamond Jim' star in 'Diamond Jim'."

The life of the man who was $200,000,000 worth of a country, who paid $100,000 on a single night, who was the confidant of Edward Arnold, and the biographer of John D. Rockefeller, is the story of a man who was a statesman and bank president, as said to be one of the most fascinating in American history. It is based on the best story by Arthur Wright, brought to the screen by Preston Sturges, directed by Edward Zwick, and produced by Edward Zwick.

In the cast, in addition to Arnold, who actually looks like the man he portrays, are beautiful Jean Arthur, Binnie Barnes, as Lillian Russell, Cesar Romero, George Sidney, Robert De Vore, and many others. Mr. Arnold gives her interpretation of the world's greatest beauty, the first of the 300, the incomparable Lillian Russell.

A London fisher on a range of a fishery in a young couple who is to be a detective, comes, then, Sherlock Holmes, The Thin Man, and the detective in all one and then out detectives all of them.

These are among the diverse details of "The Bishop Misbehaves." Marion O'Sullivan and Norman Foster play the romantic leads as the young couple that delve into amateur crime in a madcap revenge scheme and Edmund Gwenn, British actor, plays the bishop who trips them up on their nefarious plan.

Miller may turn out to be a rival of J. Edgar Hoover. It will be his job to prevent the crimes which Hoover's "G-men" are engaged in detecting.

Hoover was graduated from one law school, George Washington University, but Miller has studied or taught in no less than six. They are: Stanford, Yale, Oregon, Minnesota, Columbia and Duke.

Miller is slender but not sleuth-like. He has the retiring manner of a scholar. He now occupies a modest office in the Justice Building, where he is waiting for Congress and Cummings to say the word "Go" on crime prevention.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, November 8.—Last week's earthquake has crowded out appendicitis operations as a favorite topic of conversation.

For most New Yorkers, the tremor which shook the Atlantic seaboard was the first experience of its kind they ever had, and they made the most of it. At first, most of those who felt the shock thought a couple of extra heavy trucks had rumbled by. When they found out that it was a real quake, there was a general rush to compare notes. Strangers riding to work in the subway the next morning vied with each other in harrowing descriptions of the great geological phenomena, and for several days even the guy who'd just had his wisdom tooth pulled received scant notice at bridge parties.

Westerners who've been through real upheavals laughed at the whole affair. Except over in Brooklyn, where the walls of one house bulged an inch or two, nothing much happened beyond a slight quiver of beds and picture frames, and it was all over in less than a minute.

But jumpy citizens immediately began speculating on what would happen to the Empire State or the RCA Building in Radio City if a real shock were to occur. It took a good deal of careful scientific explaining before the population felt at ease again. At least a lot of bookkeepers and stenographers became experts in architectural design.

The quake occurred, however, on Halloween night. Maybe it was just a couple of goblins.

AGREEABLE—A group of New York business men, off to their up-State camp recently for some fall hunting, took along a new Chinese cook. The first night in camp, they decided to test out the Chinaman's cooking sense. They nailed his shoes to the floor, as a starter, and went to bed.

The next morning the Chinaman methodically removed the nails, and went about his work without a word of complaint. That night the campers tied knots in his sheets, but he didn't stir in his socks.

ANYTHING but LOVE
by JANET DORAN

When Johnny Anthony turns up in the little house of Burnwood, no one knows just who he is or where he came from. Alma Whittaker, daughter of Lawson Whittaker, one of the town's leading citizens, falls in love with him. But Johnny raises the secret of his past as a barrier between them. Alma's father wants her to marry Sig Bonriddle, who is connected with the local bank but when Sig proposes Alma rejects him. The next day her father disappears, and it is discovered that he is in grave financial difficulties. Johnny locates him at the farm of an old aunt and takes Alma there. They find him suffering from a breakdown. Alma phones her father and Harriet Falkin, who swoops down on the little farmhouse in her limousine and temporarily carries Alma and her father back to Burnwood to stay with her.

way he bowed and scraped before Carryall.

A flood of bright morning sunshine streamed through the big windows of Carryall's private office and glistened on the costly appointments of the mahogany desk. It revealed a cold stare through the carefully combed-over gray hair on Carryall's massive head.

"Now" the bank president said, "I want to know" Alma said steadily "about my father's affairs. All about them! From beginning to end!"

CARRYALL selected a cigar from a sandalwood humidor, and spent a long time clipping it and lighting it. This was just as he had expected of course. But still there was something disconcerting in the girl's direct steady gaze.

"Well, you see Miss Whittaker, your father's business has been in pretty bad shape for several years. He has had to borrow steadily. And of course, eventually he borrowed to the limit of his holdings. I'm sure we did everything in our power to help him. He caused me a great deal of trouble, and I flashed her a fleeting glance. "Of course, we thought you and Mr. Bonriddle were planning to marry. Otherwise, this state of affairs might never have occurred."

"Do you mean that you extended further credit to my father on the supposition that I would marry Sig Bonriddle and he would underwrite the responsibility?" Alma demanded incredulously.

"Mr. Bonriddle indicated as much. You were together constantly and your father expected you to marry."

"What is the market value of my father's business?" Alma asked disconcertingly. Carryall with the sudden change in her thought. "I mean present valuation?"

"Around seventy thousand dollars, possibly," he said cautiously. "And the notes?" Alma continued, her distrust of the banker increasing with every moment.

"Forty thousand, and ten more on Mr. Bonriddle's co-signature." He wondered uneasily why he hadn't turned this girl over to Tanders. "Would you like to examine the papers—the signatures?"

"No, thank you," Alma said briefly. "Not just yet." She rose and moved toward the door. Carryall's relief that the interview was not terminating with any uncomfortable scene was so obvious that he was almost comic in his alacrity to open the door and usher her out.

"Believe me Miss Whittaker," he purred smoothly, "if there is anything I can do—anything whatever—to assist you and your father I'll be most happy to be of service to you."

Alma managed a curt, "Thank you," and walked quickly out, not trusting herself to keep her composure under any further hypocrisies.

HER next stop was at the office of the District Attorney, but here her stay was very brief. "Mr. Gordon," she said directly, "I want to see a copy of this year's tax book, listing the assessed valuation of all business and personal property in Burnwood."

She found what she wanted in the book and then handed it back to him.

"One hundred thousand dollars," she said softly "and if they taxed him for that much, wouldn't the property be worth more than that, Mr. Gordon?"

"At least a hundred and thirty-five thousand, Miss Whittaker."

"I'll be back," she promised. She walked to her old home on West Hills Avenue, and let herself in the back door. The curtains were drawn, and a strange feeling of foreboding crept into her heart as she went up the back stairs toward Maggie's room.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 8—UP—Five thousand songs a year is Hollywood's contribution to American music, estimates Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, premiere song-writing team of the film industry.

Paramount Studio, where they work, makes 65 pictures annually. Each picture contains from one to 15 songs. They estimate five songs a good average—325 from that studio alone each year.

There are eight studios in Hollywood, turning out 2,000 tunes. Add on the independents, an "incidental" music that is heard lack of dialogue, but never sung, and the mass totals up to about 5,000.

Just how much is entitled to be called music, they admit, is open to debate. The majority are published, however.

"No picture," Gordon declared, "is complete without at least one song." "Fred Mac Murray only hummed two lines of a tune called 'Good Morning' in 'Hands Across the Table' yet Sam Coslow had to write a complete song; it's a good one."

"Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin wrote 15 songs for 'Rose of the Rancho.' That was a terrific job and took a couple of months. A lot of pictures need 10 tunes. Five isn't a high average at all."

United Press (U.P.) Planned Its War Coverage in May

All sources of United Press information—from the offices on the long corridors of the Quai d'Orsay in Paris—from 10 Downing Street, London, where Britain's imperial policies are made—from Palazzo Venezia in Rome, where Mussolini bent over his war maps and envisioned a new Italian Mediterranean empire—from Berlin—from Moscow—from Geneva—the confirmatory whispers came from diplomats—from statesmen—war in Ethiopia seemed inevitable.

The first line of U. P. news defense was planned.

Edward Beattie was sent from Berlin to Ethiopia—first American Press Association correspondent to reach the Ethiopian capital—H. R. Elkins, in New York, was assigned to reinforce him—Street and Packard were put on the job at Djibouti—Ed L. Keen, United Press Vice President in Europe, went to Rome—Webb Miller, chief of United Press European news organization, flew to Cairo, down the Nile to Khartoum, to Port Sudan, to Asmara, the war front of the Italian troops—everywhere contacting United Press correspondents—assigning men to new positions, everywhere searching out new short cuts to spot news contacts—expanding, reinforcing United Press first line of news defense.

More men were moved into European hot spots—to Geneva, where statesmen talk and may sometimes act—to London—to Paris—where 3,000 miles from Ethiopia a new and even more terrible war front may be created—to Berlin, where Hitler plans his strategy. New channels of communication were opened—new methods devised to reduce delays—to increase speed—to shrink the time—to get the NEWS TO YOU—FIRST.

These preparations enable United Press to be FIRST with —

- 1 Mussolini's dramatic test mobilization of Fascists.
- 2 The Italian advance into Ethiopia.
- 3 Emperor Haile Selassie's call to arms.
- 4 The air raid on Aduwa.
- 5 The capture of Adigrat.
- 6 Ethiopia's demand that League use force against Italy.

Fresh vision, independence, lack of cumbering entanglements, highest standards of service, make the news dispatches of United Press (U. P.) staff men the outstanding reports on the war.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Many Fruits, Including Bananas, Offer Specific Health Properties

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

WHEN we talk about fruits in the diet most folks think we mean only the fruits that produce a great amount of juice. Indeed, for a long period the orange monopolized the advertising field so far as the public press was concerned.

When the apple growers began to get yearly return figures on their sales and discovered a rapidly falling market, they also got busy, and at present the entire fruit industry, as well as the public health, is profiting by the extensive promotion of various forms of fruit.

But the juicy fruits are not the only ones that have shared in the research and been advanced by the findings. I can remember when the banana was a great luxury. Members of our household had to learn to eat them as we had to learn to eat olives, and, in fact, granulated sugar to "Coffee A," or soft white as we called it.

The general experiments have done much to exploit the use of the banana, and the rather recent introduction of the "alk and banana," reducing diet has done still more.

Banana Is Upheld

There has been a long extended controversy as to whether bananas were "good for you" or in other words, whether they were digestible or indigestible. We are sure that bananas may be served raw or cooked, in salads or gelatins, in pies or layer cakes as one's taste dictates. They may even be stewed and mashed into a sauce with lemon juice and sugar.

In any case, a nice large one will provide a full hundred calories of nutriment. About ten per cent of this will be fat and protein and the other nine-tenths carbohydrates.

We do not even take the banana out of the fruit juice class. For several years, it has been possible to obtain the banana in the dehydrated form as banana sugar or banana flour, and in this form it may be added to milk in very palatable kinds of beverages.

This is by no means a form of advertisement to promote the sale of bananas, but an effort to prove its health value.

The banana is known to produce a more acid condition in the intestinal tract and hence makes the calcium compounds more soluble and more easily absorbed.

The significant discovery concerning bananas is that it in some way affects what we call the vitality of life process of the bacteria that are found in the colon. This explains why we have found the banana beneficial in many of the abdominal diseases that are demonstrated in pyloric spasm and other forms of intestinal disturbance.

Intestinal Trouble Aided

This fruit is used in cases of sprue and certain diarrheal cases which have become chronic, particularly among those who have spent some time among the orientals where public hygiene is not of prime interest.

I am reminded of a personal experience which I may have told before. I was very young in this business and had on my hands a very sick baby wasting away with summer flu. Really, we had done everything and the little thing didn't seem to have the slightest chance.

While we sat by the bed one day another child of the family came in, eating a ripe banana. Something, perhaps the odor, roused the sick baby. It made a gesture, although it had refused food for several days.

In desperation, we mashed up some ripe banana and saw it sucked up with a slight show of appetite. Very slowly but quite surely, the baby improved, and a few days later was returned to a normal diet. We have not yet exhausted fruit juice and fruit pulp for their health contributions.

Short Cuts

Make cranberry juice cocktail by cooking cranberries and water until all the skins pop open (about five minutes). Use four cups cranberries to four cups of water. Strain through cheesecloth. Bring the juice to a boiling point and add two-thirds cup of granulated sugar. Boil for two minutes. Served cold, you can drink it straight. Or use it as a base for punches and fruit cups.

A neat and compact wine rack will fit in a closet. It holds twelve bottles, lying on their sides as wine should be stored.

A jar opener is a handy gadget to own. It pries loose mason jar or jelly glass lids. It grips the can firmly and then you simply turn its handle.

Profiles For Today

Mussolini, King, Are In Accord

By TALBOT LAKE

THE papers recently quoted King Victor Emmanuel of Italy as being entirely in accord with Mussolini in the latter's denunciation of the League of Nations plan to enforce economic sanctions on the land of the boot. Most of us are prone to scoff at this, believing he could say nothing else under the power of Il Duce. However, a little reviewing shows that the King may have had something to do with the whole Ethiopian plan.

In 1933 Victor Emmanuel visited Ethiopia and a year later explored Italian Somaliland. He returned in a highly enthusiastic mood, after having given thought to all the problems of the country. He was extremely proud of Italy's African kingdom and wanted to see it developed.

Since the rise of Mussolini, the King has ostensibly been relegated to the background, but there is plenty of reason to believe that Victor Emmanuel still has something to say. One reason is that he has been around a long time and has participated in many stirring times of Italy's history.

Italy's king has ruled longer than any reigning monarch except Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. He ascended the throne in 1900 upon the assassination of his father, Humbert I, at the age of thirty-one. Since then he has been very busy. He has seen the late King Albert of the Belgians, seeing his country first in the Libyan engagement and then the World War, in which he took a very active part.

After the war Victor Emmanuel saw his country torn by communist and socialist trouble. When he discerned the figure of the strong man, Mussolini, gradually emerge into the open, he took heed and soon invited Il Duce to form a government. You know the rest.

Both leaders of the government have become firm friends, the King and Mussolini often going off to ride and hunt on the monarch's vast preserves.

Care Changes Drabber Type Into a Beauty

By JACQUELINE HUNT

OF ALL the exciting things that one can write about in beauty, no subject is so popular as "make-up for types," and of all the types none is so challenging as that enormous group known as "in-betweens." Neither blonde nor true brunette in coloring; features neither beautiful nor really unattractive when you analyze them; figures that get by and stop at that!

If you are drab and in-between in coloring and plain of feature you needn't feel discouraged about it. Nature didn't bless you with a lot of gifts, to be sure, but on the other hand she didn't really leave you at a disadvantage. It's up to you to show the old girl a thing or two!

You will need to acquire a certain measure of skill in caring for yourself and to change your attitude toward life. That is all. A beautiful woman, doesn't need much skill. Her beauty will carry her a long way toward her goal in life. A homely woman will have to work hard to develop all of her wit and humaneness; to make her personality so positive that it will overcome any first impression her appearance makes.

With a little effort you can do much for both your appearance and your personality. Try to develop your sense of humor and to take a genuine interest in others. There is no better way to forget your own troubles than to share those of others. Be gay. And learn to bring out your in-between beauty in dozen subtle ways. You can never be truly striking, but you can be soft, silken, and appealing.

Make your skin lovely. There is no excuse for an in-between skin when you can get it into the really good class with a little extra care and coaxing. And your hair, while it may be a medium or light brown mousy color, can be turned into a gloriously silken halo. If it is starchy and temperamental you can improve its condition by the right treatments and make it more manageable with a good permanent. It is the quality about your hair and the way you groom it—not the color—that counts.

To have a healthy head of shining hair, and a clear, fine, radiant skin you must have a healthy body. Given that, cleanliness is next in importance. Cleanse your skin thoroughly at least once daily, stimulate it and soften it to keep it lovely. Brush your hair every night until it is thoroughly aired and pinched and freed from particles of dust and dead skin.

When you have acquired lovely hair and a lovely skin you have taken the most important steps toward letting yourself out of the "in-between" class.

Many evening costumes show great influences. Illustrative of this are the beaded models which seem to be edging their way to the front. At a recent very swanky party a black net dress over black satin seems particularly worthy of description.

Molded to the figure in princess lines, the heart-shaped decollete in front was softened by a narrow ruche of black tulle, with string shoulder straps. The body section was all-over embroidered in mat black sequins, some quite large, with fullness below the knee achieved by a series of tulle ruffles attached to the flared flounce. Five strands of graduated large pearls were worn around the neckline. They do say that the ruffles are being revived; anyway the necklace—embroidered bodice or the neckline trimmed bodice has arrived.

QUESTION: "My hands are very thin and have prominent veins and knuckles. Is it possible to make my hands more fleshy or to do something that will make the veins less conspicuous?"—G. S.

If your hands were not so thin the veins and knuckles would not be so noticeable, but it is difficult to put flesh on the hands alone. Check up on your weight, and if it isn't what it should be try to gain a few pounds. Your face and body as well as your hands will probably look younger for the extra flesh. In the meantime, exercise your hands to make them more flexible and graceful and avoid extremes of temperature. Use a soothing lotion and a softening cream for massage frequently.

QUESTION: "Can you tell me how to remove whiteheads? These are quite different from the blackheads that sometimes appear around my nose and chin, since they are hard and cannot be removed by scrubbing or even pressing."—Michel.

Soften the areas where the whiteheads appear with hot compresses and then pick carefully with a sterilized needle. Apply gentle, but firm, pressure with a thoroughly clean comedone extractor or fingertips that have been wrapped in thin pieces of cotton so you will not cut or bruise the skin with the finger-nails. Be sure to use an antiseptic afterwards to prevent infection of the tiny wounds. A careful nightly cleansing with a complex brush and soapsuds and a good make-up foundation that will prevent powder and rouge from clogging the pores will eliminate the whiteheads.

Dubonnet Color a Hit

Sports Wear Now All-year Proposition

By IRENE VAIL

New York—Sports wear has become an all-year-round proposition. More and more women are wearing clothes of this type the better part of the time. In fact, we in America are following the British lead in that respect, wearing sports clothes until it's time to get into formal evening dress. Older women are still inclined to the rather formal afternoon dress. It is distinctly our pleasure to be romantically clad for evening. The doge cape in flaming velvet is an example of this school of dress. A clever little bag, made of the same material used for the cape, is a charming addition to such a costume. It is particularly smart as a square envelope bag, but if you like something different there are pouches, and even the miser bag, to be had.

Many evening costumes show great influences. Illustrative of this are the beaded models which seem to be edging their way to the front. At a recent very swanky party a black net dress over black satin seems particularly worthy of description.

Molded to the figure in princess lines, the heart-shaped decollete in front was softened by a narrow ruche of black tulle, with string shoulder straps. Five strands of graduated large pearls were worn around the neckline. They do say that the ruffles are being revived; anyway the necklace—embroidered bodice or the neckline trimmed bodice has arrived.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "What color should the flowers be when the bouquet is for a bride on her silver wedding anniversary? Also, what color scheme should be carried out for table decoration?"—J. D.

ANSWER: A bouquet of white flowers is appropriate. The table decorations are generally a combination of silver and white. The wedding cake, in turn, should have a white icing, with the sentiments of the occasion suitably expressed in silver icing.

QUESTION: "When my brother takes me to a dance is the etiquette the same as when a strange young man takes a girl?"—Dolly B.

ANSWER: Yes. You dance the first dance together. Thereafter, providing you have a partner of your own, he may dance with whomever he pleases. He should, if you get refreshments or supper, if any. Finally, of course, he takes you home. It is his business, in short, to see that you are not neglected.

MODERN WOMEN

A Case of a Wife Whose Husband Appears to Have Become Hopeless

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

THE duties of a wife are many and varied, but I do not think being constantly humiliated and neglected for another woman is among them. The unhappy wife whose story follows has little to hope for from her husband. She must readjust her life and find her interests and what happiness she can without him. She knows this, of course, but like many another unfortunate woman who is in the same predicament, she will not admit it, even to herself.

You and Your Child

Child Humiliated by Public Punishment

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

AS JAMES came into the room, his father immediately pounced upon him with, "So there you are!" Although the boy had an inkling of what father was driving at, he was abashed rather than conscience-stricken. He knew that he should have some right home from school as usual; that it had not been right to go to Tom's.

James' frowning and twitching, and his stubborn silence, excited father to anger. He grabbed the boy and shook him. The boy submitted to the rough handling, glancing a shamed look meanwhile from his mother to his brother to little sister around to the far corner where granddaddy sat, his nose buried in a book.

Of all those present granddaddy was the only one who had the delicacy to look away. Mother's eyes were seeking dad's imploringly, while the children stared, their eyes wide with fascination. What an exciting show it was for them, seeing daddy so angry, brother suffering shame. The same thing could happen to them.

Be tactful. If you must scold or punish a child, make it a private affair. In the case referred to, how much wiser it would have been if the father had quietly said, "James, will you step into the bedroom? There is something I want to talk over with you." Behind a closed door there would be no distracting influence to take James' attention away from what father said. Here he could acknowledge his mistake or explain or defend himself, without self-consciousness. They could reach an understanding as friends, and without exciting the morbid curiosity of onlookers.

He Denies It

"She has a terrible reputation, but my husband denies the fact. He is still giving her money, for he lied and said he gave her just a dime until her husband came back. I haven't spoken to her for four months with her in the house. My husband spends all his time with her in the house. I've fussed, tried not to care, everything, but I haven't a near relative I could go to. My parents are dead. In other words, I am just a washwoman and cook for him. As soon as he eats, out he goes. She is red-headed and freckle-faced, but all she thinks of clothing. He keeps the money and by the time he pays rent and gas and other expenditures I very seldom ever get over fifty cents or a dollar. She uses the poorest of English and talks baby talk. She will do anything to get married. I am heart sick. I am heart sick of the whole situation. I have threatened to leave, but it doesn't seem to change matters. My girl is attending school for the first time this year. How could I get out of here? He says if I don't like it, to get out. Do you suppose he wants me to leave so he can marry her? There is a good deal of gossip about her. Eleven years."

You are venting your spleen on the woman instead of on your husband. He is the one who has injured you. Had he the slightest desire or intention of keeping away from temptation he never would have moved you under the same roof with this woman who represented temptation to him.

His conduct is inexcusable. A man might, in a moment of weakness, do some foolish thing that would wound his wife's vanity, but he cannot be condemned for carrying on an affair right under her nose.

Need Legal Advice

Naturally, I cannot give you legal advice, and I feel that that is what you need. You are fortunate in having your little girl in school, for the atmosphere you describe is certainly no place for her—nor for you.

Do not distress yourself about whether your husband intends to marry this girl. You shouldn't care after all you have been through. Besides, she has a husband; and even if he isn't much of a husband he is a legal obstacle. I gather you have not given him your confidence and that he is either blind or complacent.

I wish I could give you more encouragement, but as a matter of fact, you will be greatly benefited by facing facts and making an intelligent effort to rid yourself of a situation which must be intolerable.

When your husband finds out you are thoroughly acquainted with your legal rights, and sees you are determined to end the situation, without his co-operation if necessary, he may come to his senses.

Don't let this get you down. Many women have lived through similar distasteful episodes and found happiness afterwards. The point is, don't be humiliated and abused. Don't go around bemoaning your fate. Take some definite step toward re-establishing yourself.

QUESTION: "What color should the flowers be when the bouquet is for a bride on her silver wedding anniversary? Also, what color scheme should be carried out for table decoration?"—J. D.

ANSWER: A bouquet of white flowers is appropriate. The table decorations are generally a combination of silver and white. The wedding cake, in turn, should have a white icing, with the sentiments of the occasion suitably expressed in silver icing.

QUESTION: "When my brother takes me to a dance is the etiquette the same as when a strange young man takes a girl?"—Dolly B.

ANSWER: Yes. You dance the first dance together. Thereafter, providing you have a partner of your own, he may dance with whomever he pleases. He should, if you get refreshments or supper, if any. Finally, of course, he takes you home. It is his business, in short, to see that you are not neglected.

The flattery of satin can be captured even for informal hour, according to Marsha Hunt, film player. Marsha dons a semi-tailored blouse of white satin which ties around the waist and fastens with infinitesimal pearl buttons.

Autumn Harvests Provide Great Variety for Table

By JUDITH WILSON

NOVEMBER is a month that will forever symbolize plenty and the promise of prosperity. This year harvests have been unusually bountiful.

Scarlet cranberries and nuts shading from palest beige to blackest brown suggest rich, crunchy dishes and the holidays to come. This week's menus, while moderate in cost, will insure you a well-laden table.

Many evening costumes show great influences. Illustrative of this are the beaded models which seem to be edging their way to the front. At a recent very swanky party a black net dress over black satin seems particularly worthy of description.

Molded to the figure in princess lines, the heart-shaped decollete in front was softened by a narrow ruche of black tulle, with string shoulder straps. The body section was all-over embroidered in mat black sequins, some quite large, with fullness below the knee achieved by a series of tulle ruffles attached to the flared flounce. Five strands of graduated large pearls were worn around the neckline. They do say that the ruffles are being revived; anyway the necklace—embroidered bodice or the neckline trimmed bodice has arrived.

QUESTION: "My hands are very thin and have prominent veins and knuckles. Is it possible to make my hands more fleshy or to do something that will make the veins less conspicuous?"—G. S.

If your hands were not so thin the veins and knuckles would not be so noticeable, but it is difficult to put flesh on the hands alone. Check up on your weight, and if it isn't what it should be try to gain a few pounds. Your face and body as well as your hands will probably look younger for the extra flesh. In the meantime, exercise your hands to make them more flexible and graceful and avoid extremes of temperature. Use a soothing lotion and a softening cream for massage frequently.

QUESTION: "Can you tell me how to remove whiteheads? These are quite different from the blackheads that sometimes appear around my nose and chin, since they are hard and cannot be removed by scrubbing or even pressing."—Michel.

Soften the areas where the whiteheads appear with hot compresses and then pick carefully with a sterilized needle. Apply gentle, but firm, pressure with a thoroughly clean comedone extractor or fingertips that have been wrapped in thin pieces of cotton so you will not cut or bruise the skin with the finger-nails. Be sure to use an antiseptic afterwards to prevent infection of the tiny wounds. A careful nightly cleansing with a complex brush and soapsuds and a good make-up foundation that will prevent powder and rouge from clogging the pores will eliminate the whiteheads.

was investigator in the district attorney's office and of the number, two were destroyed, and the money from 17 of them returned to the owner of the machines. What became of the other machines he did not know.

MYATT IS BRIEF

Investigator Melvin Myatt's testimony was very short. He told of leading the recent raid at the Rancho and of the property that was seized.

County Treasurer C. L. Dodge and County Purchasing Agent Ferdinand Morrow testified to amounts of money taken from slot machines and deposited in the county treasury.

Justice of the Peace A. H. MacKinnon of El Cerrito and A. B. Wilson of Martinez appeared before the jury with their records and showed the dates of the issuance of orders for the destruction of slot machines.

GAVE DEPUTIES ORDERS

Former Sheriff R. R. Veale testified that he had turned the orders for destruction of seized property over to his deputies to carry out, and he believed they had done as directed.

Deputy County Clerk Walter Paasch testified that one time in going to the hall of records, he noticed a truck standing in front of the building, which contained a number of slot machines. He could not remember the date of the occurrence, nor had he any information as to the disposition of the machines.

NOT IN THE LOT

J. M. Joseph, former deputy sheriff, was another witness. It was his testimony that the duty of destroying confiscated property last year was entrusted to Joseph, told the jury that he had destroyed all property ordered by the court, but when shown the roulette wheel in question and on exhibition, definitely stated that it was not in the lot of confiscated goods.

USED FOR TABLE

The fact of the matter is that some of the property ordered destroyed was taken and made over and is now in use in a number of the department offices in the public buildings at Martinez. It is stated on the list of authority that the large table in one of the trial jury rooms is a part of a former roulette table.

STANDS ON RIGHTS

W. M. Peckhart, alleged owner of the Rancho San Pablo appeared in answer to a subpoena, but refused to testify on constitutional grounds. His appearance before the jury lasted about two minutes.

J. M. Klepper, former truck driver in the sheriff's office testified to hauling a large quantity of confiscated property to the dump and watching it destroyed.

HOEY ATTACKS HARRISON

James F. Hoey, former district attorney, appeared and was questioned by his successor. He stated that a complete record of every case that he handled during his term was on file in the office of the district attorney, and there was nothing for which he had to make an apology to anyone.

He frankly admitted, when questioned, that he had returned money in seized slot machines to one owner, because he had come and asked for it, and would have done the same in other cases if the owner

The grand jury was a secret body, could not give out any information, and that transcripts of the testimony could not be given to him or any other official, only in case of an indictment, and then only to the district attorney. When it was transcribed the law provided it should be delivered to the county clerk within ten days, and a copy to the district attorney. Otherwise, could not see the transcript until after the indicted person was in custody.

DEFINITE HINT
In fact, he was also given to the two court reporters, that if they transcribed the testimony in violation of the law, that they had better look for new positions.

HEALEY ISSUES DEFI
For the present no testimony has been transcribed, but District Attorney Healey asserts there is no violation in the law to prevent him from giving out information.

"When I was 'c'ed," said Healey, "I made the statement there would be no secrets in the office of the district attorney. It is true that the taxpayers of the county only see for their attorneys what is said, but they are entitled to know what is going on. I promised to open up the books of the county to the public, and if there is any way I can do it, I will."

For the present an immense expense, but how long before there will be another check as to authority, is being watched with a great deal of interest in all parts of the county.

TELLS ABOUT FOUR
Al Minner, who in public appearances, later repeated to the district attorney, assumed responsibility for the fact that he had been in the raid at the Rancho San Pablo, related his story to the inquisitorial body.

Minner was engaged with three friends while employed as a man during the strike at the sugar refinery at Crocker several months ago. When his duties there terminated he inadvertently carried away one of the bonds in his suitcase. Securing employment at the Rancho he took the bond there because of rumors to the effect that there was a plot to hold up the place. The bond was never with him, the Rancho itself, but was found on the premises.

suggest to the governor that he use the discount privilege in the purchase of a radio for himself. However, his offering is not any greater than that of higher officials who have been abusing expense accounts to the extent that the practice has degenerated into a racket. The State, in these matters, seems to be the kind of a sucker that never is given a "break."

Governor Merriam has discovered a number of things and practices which have a malodorous smell connected with them, and promises to lay the result of his inquiry before the next legislature.

It has been apparent for some time that a thorough fumigation of several departments of state would prove beneficial. The abuses are of long standing and cannot be in justice he laid at the door of Governor Merriam. They existed long before he took office, and doubtless will be found again and again after he has passed out of the picture.

State departments need a thorough pruning every year. The honest official will not suffer and the dishonest one may thus, through the fear of exposure, keep within the paths of rectitude.

ITALIANS IN AFRICA TAKE TWO TOWNS

ROME, Nov. 8.—(UP)—Italian forces surged forward on four fronts in Ethiopia today, seizing two major objectives and making important progress toward three others.

The tricolor was raised over Maiale, northern Ethiopian caravan center, at 9 A. M. A mixed column of Blackshirts, Bersaglieri, native Askaris and Ras Haile Selassie's Galla's deserters took possession without firing a shot. A government spokesman said Italy never will surrender Maiale.

In the south, General Rodolfo Benzi's troops captured the fortified strategic center of Garacha by a two-sided attack late today. First dispatches made no mention of casualties but it was believed the fortified area was defended hotly.

CAMP IS TAKEN

WITH THE ITALIAN SOUTH-ERN ARMIES, by Courier via Maiale, Italian Somaliland, Nov. 8.—(UP)—The strategic southern Ethiopian fortified camp of Goralma was occupied by Italian troops today without firing a shot.

A terrific aerial bombardment preceded the occupation by native troops. Armored cars led the ground advance.

The Ethiopians, who had been entrusted with defense of the important positions at all costs, held out last Monday after their commander, General Atework, was seriously injured by a bomb splinter.

struck by a machine driven by LeRoy McGrew, colored, 6, 221 Modoc street, Fresno, at Market and Twentieth streets in San Pablo. The machine struck the Anderson car in the rear, turning it around and the McGrew machine then smashed into a power pole across the highway. He was alone at the time of the crash.

GIRL ESCAPES DEATH

The eight-year-old Tallasero girl escaped death in an accident at San Pablo and Central avenues in El Cerrito earlier in the evening. The child was hurled from the machine which her mother was driving, when it collided with a car driven by O. E. Carlson, husband of Mrs. Annie Carlson. The Carlson car overturned and the Tallasero automobile was badly damaged. The three injured were treated at Humboldt hospital for cuts, bruises and shock. The two cars collided head-on when Mrs. Tallasero made a left-hand turn on San Pablo avenue. The Carlsons were headed south. Carlson was shaken up by the force of the crash but refused medical treatment.

WOMEN ARE HURT

Mrs. Jack sustained cuts and bruises on her chest when her machine was involved in a collision with a car driven by Alta S. Lyder, 404 Twenty-third street, Richmond on Arlington avenue near the El Cerrito city line. The injured woman was treated at an Albany hospital. Both cars were badly damaged.

In a collision in Richmond, Josephine Putman sustained cuts and bruises but refused medical treatment. Her machine and a car driven by John A. Robak, 888 McLaughlin avenue, collided at Thirty-fifth street and Barrett avenue. Both cars were only slightly damaged.

Bake in a hot oven for 15 to 20 minutes, crisping the top under the broiler flame just before removing from oven. Serve hot.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Lunch Box Problem)
Question: H. G. writes: "I do hard manual labor and must carry my lunch to work. Will you be good enough to tell me some suitable combinations through your column, as I know there are others who need this same advice?"

Answer: If you can procure genuine wholewheat bread, make sandwiches of it with fresh butter or peanut butter and lettuce. Provide yourself with a thermos bottle in which you may carry any of the following cooked vegetables: spinach, stringbeans, asparagus, summer squash, eggplant, small carrots or beets, etc. Add one or two of the salad vegetables, such as celery or cucumbers wrapped in a damp cloth, and you have a most appetizing and beautiful. Send for my special article on packing lunches, as it will offer other suggestions. Please include with your request a large, self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin.

(What Kind of Mattress)
Question: Mrs. F. W. writes: "I would like your opinion of the different materials used in mattresses. What would you advise—felt, cotton, or silk floss?"

Answer: It does not matter of what material the mattress is made as long as it is comfortable, and properly supports the weight of the body.

(Stale Bread)

Question: A. M. asks: "Is stale bread more easily digested than fresh? If so, why?"

Answer: The reason stale bread is digested more readily than fresh is because it requires thorough mastication and has lost its freshness due to its dryness. There is no less starch in stale bread, however, and if one is attempting to avoid too much starchy food it is best to toast the bread completely through in order to dextrinize every particle.
